

BARS CLOSE TONIGHT UNTIL WILSON DECIDES HE HAS THE POWER TO LIFT PROHIBITION

For Many in Connellsville and Elsewhere Day is one of Acute Sorrow, for Others Indifferent Occasion; Local Cellars Well Stocked Against Day of Drouth, Say Reports.

LAST MINUTE RUSH TO SECURE AMPLE SUPPLY

The joy will be taken out of life for a lot of Connellsville people at 9 o'clock tonight or as near that time as the barrooms can be cleared. Of course, elsewhere in the country there will be moments of happiness until midnight but Fayette county regulations call for the closing of drink emporiums in the state of the evening so prohibition will be effective here three hours in advance of the times. It will be Black Monday for many.

Liquor lovers who hung on to a hope that President Wilson might, by proclamation, set back the dry spell until the advent of national prohibition next January received a setback when the chief executive announced that, in view of the fact that something like a million soldiers were still under arms, he did not feel justified in suspending the war-time prohibition. The last straw to grab at now, the only thing left to do was make the last wet hours as joyous as possible.

Although there was plenty of drinking on Saturday night, drunks were few. Twelve were picked up by the city police on Saturday and five on Sunday. For the last wet Saturday night that is considered a good showing.

Some of the police worked until midnight Saturday, and John Barnes was kept in as an extra policeman. The police, however, expect more disorder tonight.

The thing of prohibition on, however, will not be acute for many weeks or months to come, for almost everyone who likes the stuff has stocked up. A lot of whiskey has been put by for "medicinal purposes" by those who admit that as a beverage it is nothing in their lives. Medicinal whiskey, however, may be consumed with the same relish as any other variety.

Connellsville cellars, it is stated, contain more valuables now than at any previous time in the history of the city.

And they are carefully locked, with the key in the hands of "Mister." It is predicted that second-story men will abandon their profession and confine their purloinings to cellars.

"See these 12 bottles there," asked one Connellsville man as he displayed a dozen quarts of Overholt reclining on the top of his cellar wall, in the empty space beneath the floor beams. "That's more liquor than I would drink in a thousand years. And on the basis of one quart a year for medicinal uses, I have enough to last me 12 years or even longer. But a lot of those bottles will go to friends for Christmas presents. Some of them will have exhausted their own stock by the time the 25th of December rolls around and they'll be darned glad to get a bottle as a present."

Another little phase of the stocking-up business is that the buyers of whiskey at the distilleries must sign up for what they buy. In this way the government, through the distilleries, keeps a record of where the product of such establishment goes. "A copy of that record would know them where to go for a drink after his own supply had been exhausted."

With the closing of the city's 11 barrooms, a number of rooms desirable for other businesses will be available. Negotiations for some are already on, it is said, although definite news of the proposed changes is lacking. Whether all of the hotels will continue to provide rooms and meals remains to be seen. A number of proprietors, however, are contemplating throwing up the sponge entirely, now that the additional revenue from their bars is cut. Diningrooms were never run at a profit, the hotel men state, especially recently, with prices of food sky-high.

A great quantity of glass was noticed on the streets on Saturday night. Indication of many broken bottles. One bar, at least, packed bottles for its customers in picnic baskets and some of these disgraced their contents on the streets when the owners found it hard to pay gate. A brick street is hard on both ends.

The last hours of John Barleycorn's existence will be watched with interest tonight, even by those who do not formally assist in being present at his death. A lot of fun is anticipated. The police, however, will see to it that it does not become too funny.

Nine o'clock is the hour, gentlemen: Monday, June 30, the day—the only day of his peculiar kind in the history of the world.

TENTH REGIMENT OFFICERS ENTER STRONG PROTEST

Against Plan of Army to Give Name "Keystone Division" to the Regulars.

"WE WON'T STAND FOR IT"

Lieutenant Colonel Graco Protests, Voicing Opinion of Other Former Officers; N. G. P. Can Take Care of Traditions of the Pennsylvanians.

The proposition of the general staff of the Army to assign to some regular division the insignia and designation, the 26th, or "Keystone" Division, is being very strenuously opposed by the former officers of the Tenth Regiment and of the old National Guard of Pennsylvania generally.

The protest was first voiced at a reunion of the officers of the Tenth Regiment held at the Pike Run Country club, near Jones Mills, Saturday afternoon. The occasion was largely of a social nature and reminiscent character but when Congressman Thomas S. Graco, formerly lieutenant colonel of the regiment, touched upon the subject of an appropriation by the Regular Army of the distinctive title by which the National Guard of Pennsylvania was known during the war, there was decided expression in opposition to the plan of the general staff.

"We won't stand for it," Colonel Graco declared emphatically, "and we are going to prevent it if it takes an act of Congress to stop it."

Brigadier General Richard Coulter, former colonel of the Tenth, Major Edward Martin, who rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel with the 110th Infantry in France, and Congressman Henry W. Temple, who served as chaplain of the Tenth under Colonel James H. Barnett and also under Colonel Coulter, and other former officers of the regiment, expressed similar sentiments on the proposition.

All the officers present were unanimous in the opinion that the Pennsylvania National Guard was well able to take care of the traditions established by the "Keystone Division," and that any effort to have those traditions transferred to a regular army unit would meet with determined opposition.

The reorganization of the National Guard of Pennsylvania will take place during the summer. It will comprise 12,000 enlisted men and officers, or about 3,000 more than in the old guard. The first step was taken last week when Governor Sprunt named Brigadier General Coulter, Colonel George C. Richards and Colonel E. C. Shannon as commanders of the three brigades into which the new guard will be organized. The appointments were confirmed by the Senate shortly before adjournment last week.

DERAILED CAR BUMPS TOWER AT CONFLUENCE FROM BASE

One of the most peculiar accidents in the history of the Connellsville division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad occurred last night at 11:25 o'clock when a car leaving the rails at Confluence bumped into the signal tower there and moved it off its foundation.

TWO FRENCHMEN KILLED AND FIVE AMERICANS SEVERELY WOUNDED IN RIOTS AT BREST

Hundred Others Hurt in Fighting After French Flag is Torn Down.

THE EMBLEM IS TRAMPLED

Act by American Naval Officer, Said to Have Been Drinking, is Signal for Mob of Frenchmen Attacking Yankees; Marines Restore Order.

By Associated Press. BREST, June 28.—Two French civilians were killed and five American soldiers and sailors were injured severely and more than 100 were injured in riots here last night. Two of the American soldiers are expected to die. The casualties occurred as a result of an exchange of shots between American military and naval police and French sailors.

The trouble began, according to available accounts, when an American naval officer who is said to have been drinking heavily, tore down a French flag and trampled on it. A crowd of Frenchmen attacked the officer and, it is said, kicked and beat him until he was unconscious.

American officers passed by and who were not aware of the cause of the fight went to the aid of the naval officer, the fight then became general. A mob of French civilians and soldiers and sailors attempted to rush the Hotel Moderne where American officers were quartered. They burned a sentry box and threw stones at American uniforms wherever they found them. The Americans, it is said, retaliated.

A company of marines with fixed bayonets was hurried to the scene and the Americans soon restored order. Admiral Henri Salaun, the French naval commander at Brest, ordered the marines to return to their barracks. As the marines marched back to their quarters, it is declared, they were pursued by a mob throwing stones and bricks.

The city is quiet today.

Car of Elzio Nannini Misses Pole and Is Wrecked Against Bank.

Elzio Nannini and four others riding in Mr. Nannini's Apperson "Jack-Rabbit" automobile narrowly escaped serious injury Saturday night when the car crashed into the bank at the sharp turn near the foot of West Side hill in Crawford avenue, when Nannini attempted to avoid a collision with another machine. The occupants of the automobile were shaken up but none seriously injured. The accident occurred about 12 o'clock.

The machine was badly damaged. Only one wheel was left on it, both front ones and the right rear wheel being torn off. The two front axles were torn off and the fenders badly bent.

As the car plowed into the hillside it narrowly escaped striking a telephone pole head on. Had this occurred the result might have been more serious. However, the pole was only grazed, part of it being shaved off. Nannini, it is understood, had no alternative but to run into the hillside unless he wished to collide with a car coming down. It is said a spotlight on the other machine was focused on Nannini's car, making it difficult for him to steer.

He spent a part of his boyhood days in that township, later moving to Bullskin township. WILLIAM STAFFORD.

William Stafford, 55 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, dropped dead in the yard of his home in Baldwin avenue, where he had gone to feed some stock and poultry, Sunday morning. Mr. Stafford arose at his usual hour, 5 o'clock, but was not feeling well, complaining of a shortage of breath. His sudden death was pronounced due to heart trouble and the infirmities of old age.

Mr. Stafford was born in Connelville, June 25, 1851, a son of William and Charlotte Stafford, who at their time were among the best known residents of the city. His grandparents were also natives of Connelville. The deceased spent all of his life here. He served with the 155th Pennsylvania Volunteers in the Civil War, enlisting in 1861. He served three years. He was wounded in the battle of the Wilderness and also at Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864. A bullet which lodged in his knee was never removed. Schroyer of South Connelville, six brothers and six sisters.

SLIGHT DECREASE

In the Production of Bituminous Coal

Lake Shipments Greater Than 1918.
A slight decrease in the production of bituminous coal was recorded for the week ended June 14, says the weekly report of the United States Geological Survey. The estimated output of 8,782,000 tons compared with 8,917,000 tons in the first week in June and 8,724,000 tons in the week ended May 25.

The shipments of lake coal continue to exceed the million-ton rate per week. The total dumpings in the week ended June 7 are reported at 1,074,000 tons, nearly 70,000 tons greater than the previous week, and more than the corresponding week of last year. The total lake coal dumped to June 7, this year, exceeds the total for the corresponding period of last year by nearly 1,200,000 tons, or 25 per cent.

The production of anthracite in the week ended June 14 is estimated at 1,680,000 net tons, about the same as the preceding week, but nearly 15 per cent below the estimated output for the corresponding week of 1918. The total production for the calendar year to date is estimated at 55,180,000 tons compared with 44,800,000 tons in the corresponding period of last year.

The Quaker Bonnet.

I have heard that there is as much technique in the making of the bonnet of the olden pattern for the Friends as there is in the Japanese art of drinking tea. In Ohio there is a section that wears the Quaker garb with the bonnet; there is another in Iowa that still keeps to the characteristic costume; in New York in a settlement on both sides of Lake Cayuga are Friends who follow the simple, historic fashion; and in Falchopa, Ala., a single tax settlement very largely settled by Friends are others. Much importance is attached to what is called the "expression" of the bonnet. In the very simplicity there is quite as much room for the manifestation of a particular taste as in the more elaborate millinery of "the world's people." Even to half a hair things must be right. The finished product comes in for a close critical scrutiny at every possible opportunity. The true Friend abhors display and self-advertisement, and, therefore, she does not care to have it known when a fresh bonnet is bought. That is why each must be the same as the one that preceded it.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Rooster Ate 485 Kernels.

A storekeeper at Montgomery City has sprung a new one in the guessing game. He took a big rooster and, after letting him fast for a day, put him in his show window with a large pan of corn, the kernels of which had been counted.

He offered a prize to the persons guessing nearest the number of grains the rooster would eat in 20 minutes. The rooster had a ravenous appetite and for five minutes it looked as if there would not be a single kernel left.

But by the time the 20 minutes had elapsed he had curled up in a corner. He had succeeded in putting away 485 grains. A woman whose guess was 488 got the prize.—Kansas City Times.

That Scottdale will have airplane flights on the Fourth is an assured fact and the fliers will be local boys J. D. Hill and Torrence Overholt.

CATTLE LICK WHITEWASH FROM PICKET FENCE TO GET SALT IN THE "PAINT"

SMITHFIELD, June 30—J. F. Porter, living at old Springfield furnace along the foot of the mountain and the "foremost" covey of Springfield township, had a unique serenade in front of his well-appointed home the picket fence in front of which he had just recently beautified with a coat of whitewash. A neighbor had informed him that to make the whitewash stick he should put a liberal quantity of salt in the mixture which he did.

Now all the cattle belonging to the neighbors in that community graze and run at large on the mountain side and are provided with the old-time cow bell. These getting the odor of the salt in whitewash, a commodity of which they had been deprived for a long period, roused pell mell down from their grazing grounds and commenced licking the fence giving Porter an all-night serenade of a cow bell choir.

BOTH BREWERS AND ATTORNEYS CLAIM VICTORY IN RULING

Latter Forbidden to Prosecute Makers of 2.75 Per Cent Beer; Revenue Collector Enjoined.

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 30—Attorneys for both the brewers and the Federal government claim to have gained a victory through an opinion handed down last week by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals modifying Judge Mayer's preliminary injunction against interference with or prosecution for the production and sale of beer containing not more than 2.75 per cent alcoholic content.

The original order restrained the acting collector of internal revenue from interfering with the manufacture or sale of 2.75 per cent beer pending a legal decision as to whether it was "intoxicating." It also forbade the United States attorney from prosecuting the brewers and retailers of such beer.

The decision strikes out the injunction pendente lite against the Federal prosecutor making it possible for him to proceed as he sees fit but continues in force the injunction against the revenue collector.

Counsel for the brewing interests declared the decision was a clear victory for his clients and that the right to manufacture and sell 2.75 per cent beer after July 1 was assured. The brewers were ready to prove he said that beer of that potency was non-intoxicating and it was now up to the courts to decide whether war-time prohibition forbade the sale of all beer or merely intoxicating beer.

Judge Rogers, who joined with Judge Hough in a partial dissent said that for more than 20 years the Department of Internal Revenue had treated beer containing one-half of one per cent or more of alcohol as a small liquor and that during that time the brewers of the country had acquiesced in that definition.

In the absence of some definite legislation said Judge Rogers the court cannot undertake to say as a matter of law the liquor which contained 2.75 per cent of alcohol by weight is "not intoxicating."

WOMEN EQUAL TO MEN

In Operating Farm Tractors, Kansas Educator Discovers.

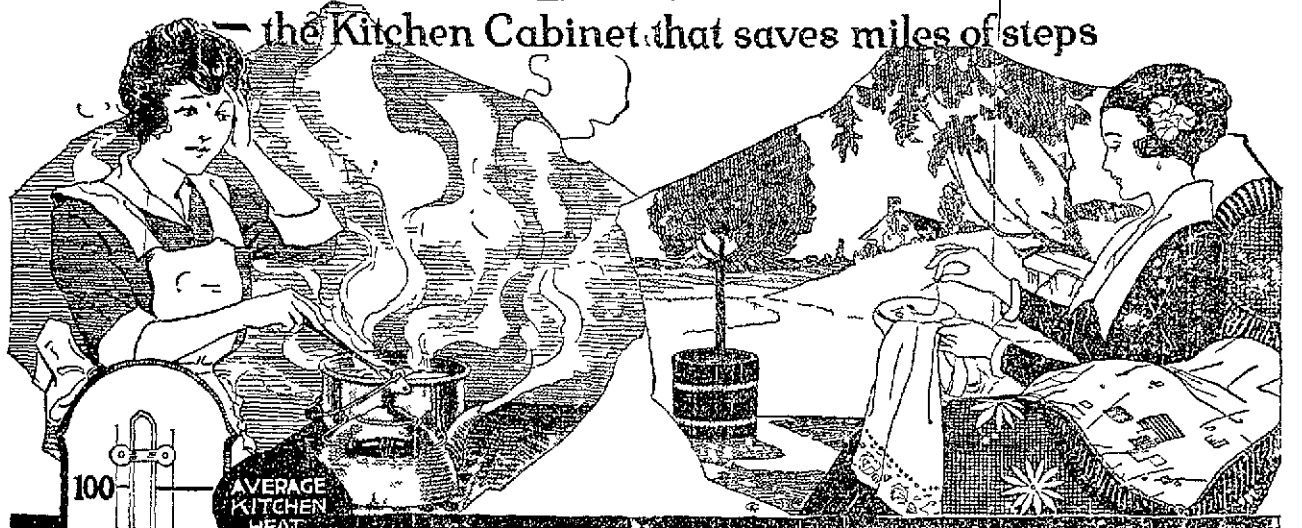

Women are just as good operators of farm tractors as men and in a good many instances the women are better operators than a lot of the men who drive the big machines. This is the word that has gone out to the farm girls and even city girls of Kansas direct from the folks who ought to know—the farm motor school of the Kansas Agricultural college. K. J. T. Ekblaw, professor of farm engineering of that college made the announcement a few days ago as he prepared the certificates of graduation from the farm motor school for four young women who have completed the course. He said:

The women we have had to do good work the equal or the superior of the men enrolled with them. They go at their work in a systematic, energetic way and are not afraid of dirt and grease. In trouble work the women are particularly good at analyzing the difficulty and remedying it. They are quicker than the men in getting at the trouble and can fix things as fast as any man.

The farm women soon learned a stage make up secret when they began handling tractors and motored cars. This was to give their hands and faces a good coating of cold cream before they started out. Then if the oiling and adjustment of the machines caused them to get their hands greasy and dirty and if they should touch a dirty finger to their face the dirt and grease all came off easily with a swipe of a soft rag or even with waste.

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 30—Joseph Konkol, aged 38 years, was driving his Ford car down the Car-pentertown hill yesterday afternoon when the car turned turtle and upset on Konkol, killing him instantly. The body was brought to the Reichman undertaking parlors and prepared for burial. Konkol, who lived at Calumet, was one of the leading Slovaks in that community. The body was taken to his home there. He is survived by a wife and several grown children. No funeral arrangements have been made.
The car Konkol was driving ran into a Connellsville car and damaged the car but the occupants escaped uninjured.

Ruder Inn Sale Postponed.
The Ruder Inn which was to have been sold on Saturday was not sold and the sale was postponed another week. Just who will buy this property and what will be done with it has caused quite a little talk in town.
Since licenses were refused to sell liquor no meals have been served but rooms have been rented. The Ruder Inn was one of the best hotels in Mount Pleasant and was known for the excellent meals that were served.
Along with the Donnelly hotel the Spelker hotel has been made into a soft drink establishment and lunch room. Last week the Central bar was opened with soft drinks and all of the three are well patronized. All of the hotels have left up their curtains and maintain a certain amount of secrecy which men always admire having and this has not changed the appearance of the place, the bars are left in and only old time booze is in use.

crows are hatching, the state officers

REV. NELSON PLEADS WITH PEOPLE OF NEW CHURCH TO DO BEST

That Is None Too Good, Says Former Local Minister in Opening Sermon at Newport.

Rev. Wilbur Nelson, who resigned as pastor of the First Baptist church here to assume the pastorate of the First Baptist John Clarke Memorial church at Newport, R. I., preached his first sermon to his new congregation on Sunday, June 22, in the presence of a large congregation. The following excerpt, referring to the new pastor and his sermon, appeared in a Newport newspaper.

Rev. Wilbur Nelson, formerly of Connellsville, Pa., began his pastori-ate at the First Baptist John Clarke Memorial church Sunday morning and was greeted with a large congregation at his opening service. Rev. Mr.
Nelson takes the place of Rev. Albert H. Adams, Jr., who resigned from the pastorate of this church to go to East Greenwich.

The new minister of the First church is an earnest and convincing preacher and at yesterday morning's service he expressed his appreciation of the call that he had received to come to Newport and said that he had been looking forward with anticipation to coming here.

He said that he thought that it would be most fitting to begin his first sermon as pastor with the first words of the Bible, the first words of the first verse of the first chapter of Genesis: "In the beginning God."

"Rev. Mr. Nelson appealed to the members of the church to do their best and if they did they could not but succeed. The best is none too good for the King of kings," he said.

GOVERNOR APPROVES

Compensation, Suffrage and Anti-Sedition Bills.

HARRISBURG, June 30—Governor Sproul has signed the resolution ratifying the woman suffrage amendment, also the anti-sedition and compensation bills.

The latter increases compensation from 50 per cent to 60 per cent with the minimum wage of $70 and the maximum of $20 per week remaining as in the original act. By the increase in percentage the minimum compensation is increased from $7 to $8.50 per week and the maximum is increased from $10 to $12. Under the amendments too, the period of waiting is reduced from 14 to 10 days and provides that employers must give free treatment for a period of 30 days instead of 14 days. Under the original act a week was considered as five and one-half working days and compensation was based on that number of days. Under the new measure, compensation is based on the actual number of days worked in a week.

CREDIT GIVEN DAVE SHEAN

Thought by Other Members of Boston Red Sox to Have Made Team Possible Pennant Winner.

Dave Shean is thought by the other members of the team to have made the Red Sox a pennant winner last year. Dave stepped into Jack Barry's shoes and filled them very acceptably. Shean is not as young as he used to be. He waited a long time before being accorded the major league recognition it is now conceded that he deserves.

Dave knocked around in the minors for quite a while. He even tried his hand at managing the Providence team of the International league. And he was a good manager.

He had been up in the National league once with Boston and turned back. Three years ago he came up again with Cincinnati.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE AMATEUR ADVENTURERS"
The story of a young girl Norma Wood, who is tired of the humdrum existence of every day life in an office, is being presented today. Emmy Wehlen, the beautiful Metro star, is seen in the leading role. She determines to set out in search of adventure—in other words, to see life. To accomplish this requires money and, most important of all, beautiful clothes. How to get them is the problem. But, being a woman, Norma accomplishes them both and the only thing that remains is the adventure itself. Fate plays into her hands and she meets Oliver Morley who attracted by her beauty, tells her that she is the type he has been looking for and that he has some work for her to do. He explains that his sister's son, Gregory Sontel, has entangled himself with the daughter of a delinquent keeper and that his nephew's mother is willing to pay five thousand dollars to any girl who will extricate Gregory from his infatuation. The work is to be considered complete when Gregory proposes to her. Norma agrees to accept and takes up her residence at the Sontel home. Her mission is not hard to accomplish and before long she earns her reward. Miss Wehlen's dramatic powers and whimsical humor have never appeared to better advantage. A selected comedy is also being shown. Tuesday Bessie Love will be presented in "The Little Boys."

THE SOISSON.

"OUT OF THE FOG"—The screen masterpiece of which the great Nazimova is the star is an interesting attraction today. This intense and forceful actress is provided with two distinctive roles which brought out with dramatic conviction her superb power of acting. The action of the play starts in a little fishing village in New England where Faith, the sister of Job Coffin, known throughout the country for his narrow and harsh life, and his bigoted re-young fisherman. Before they can be married he is lost in a storm and Faith's little daughter, Eve, is born fatherless. The wrath of Job Coffin is terrible and he deems the young mother and her babe to perpetual solitude on a desolate island, light-house in the Caribbean sea. In despair Faith commits suicide and Eve is left alone with her uncle. Dressed always in boy's clothes and without companionship she grows to beautiful womanhood on the lonely "Ception Shoals," until romance and adventure come to her when a yacht is stranded on the treacherous shoals in a dense and blinding fog. The story is beautifully told and superbly acted and the star is seen in the best and most dramatic role of her internationally famous career. Supporting Nazimova is a cast of sterling players, numbering such actors as Charles Bryant, Henry Harmon and Charles Smiley. A selected comedy is also being shown. Both attractions will be presented tomorrow.

Pieces of Eight

Being the Authentic Narrative of a Treasure Discovered in the Bahamas Islands in the Year 1933—Now First Given to the Public.

RICHARD LEGALLIEN

However, the man who had mortified them had done an honest piece of work, and they proved as firm as on the day they were placed there. Up and up I went, till I must have been forty feet above the floor, and then, as I neared the foot, instead of coming to a trap door, as I had conjectured, I found that the ladder came to an end at the edge of a narrow ledge, running along the ceiling, and as I clambered up, I found that it was a narrow ledge, and the ladder did not permit of one's standing erect. It was a dizzy situation, and it seemed safest to crawl along on all fours, holding the lantern in front of me. Presently it brought me up sharp in a narrow recess. It had come to an end.

Yes! but imagine my joy! It had come to an end at a low archway rudely cut in the rock. Deep set in the archway was a stout wooden door. My first thought was that I was trapped again, but, to my infinite surprise and gratitude, it proved to be slightly ajar, and a vigorous push sent it grinding back on its hinges. What next? I wondered. At all events, I was no longer lost in the bowels of the earth; step by step, I was coming nearer to the frontiers of humanity.

But I was certainly not prepared for what next met my eyes, as I pushed through the low doorway with my lantern, and looked around. Yes! indeed, man had certainly been here, man, too, very purposeful and businesslike. I was in a sort of low narrow gallery, some forty feet long, to which the arching rock made a crypt-like ceiling. At my first glance, I saw that there was another door at the far end similar to the one I had entered by; and on the left side of the gallery, built of rough stones from the low ceiling to the floor, was a series of compartments, each with locked wooden door. They were strong and grim looking, and might have been taken for prison cells, or family vaults, or possibly wine bins. The massive locks were red with rust, and there was plainly no possibility of opening them.

On the other side of the gallery there was a litter of old chains, and some boards, probably left over from the doors. Yes, and there were two old flintlock guns, and several cutlasses, all of which were lying on a rough wooden chest, open and falling to pieces. At the sight of that, a wild thought flashed through my brain. What if—Good God! What if this was John Teack's treasure?—behind those grim doors. I threw myself with all my force against one and then the other. For the moment I forgot that my paramount business was to escape. But I might as well have hurled myself against the solid rock. And, at that moment, I noticed that the place was darker than it had been. My lantern was going out. In a moment or two I should be in the pitch dark, and I had discovered that the door at the end of the gallery was as solid as the others.

I was to be trapped, after all; and I pictured myself slowly dying there of hunger—the pangs of which I was already beginning to feel—and some one, years hence, finding me there, a moldering skeleton—some one who would break open those doors, uncover those gleaming boards, and moralize on the irony of my end; condemn me to die there of starvation, with the treasure I had so long sought on the other side of those unyielding doors. Old Tom's words suddenly flashed over me, and I could feel my hair literally beginning to rise. "There never was a buried treasure, yet that didn't claim its victim." Great God!—and I was to be the ghost, and keep guard in this terrible tomb till the next dead man came along to relieve me of my sentry duty!

Fortunately I turned up the wick of my lantern at the thought—but it was no use; it was plainly going out. I examined my match box; I had still a dozen or so matches left. And then my eye fell on that shattered chest. There were those boards, too. At all events I could build a fire and make torches of silvers, or wood, so long as the wood lasted.

And then I had an idea. Why not make the fire against the door at the end of the gallery, and so burn my way through. Bravo! My spirits rose at the thought, and I set to at once—splitting some small kindling with my knife. In a few minutes I had quite a sprightly little fire going at the bottom of the door; but I saw that I should have to be extravagant with my wood if the fire was to be effective. However, it was neck or nothing; so I piled on beams and boards till my fire roared like a furnace, and presently I had the joy of seeing it begin to take hold of the door—which, after a short time, began to crackle and splutter in a very cheering fashion.

Whatever lay beyond, it was evident that I should soon be able to break my way through the obstacle, and, indeed, so it proved; for, presently, I used one of the boards as a battering ram, and, to my indescribable joy, it went crashing through, with a shower of sparks, and it was but the work of a few more minutes before the whole door fell flaming down, and I was able to leap through the doorway into the darkness on the other side.

As I stood there, peering ahead, and holding aloft a burning stick—which proved, however, a poor substitute for my lantern—a wonderful sound smote my ears. I could not believe it, and my knees shook beneath me. It was the sound of the sea.

Yes, it was no illusion. It was this sound that the sea makes singing and echoing through hollow caves—the sound I heard that night as I stood at the mouth of Calypso's cavern, and saw that vision which my heart nearly broke to remember. Calypso! Oh Calypso! where was she at this moment? Pray God that she was indeed safe, as her father had said. But I had to will her from my mind, to keep from going mad.

And my poor torch had gone out, having, however, given me light enough to see that the door which I had just burnt through let out onto a narrow platform on the side of a rock that went slanting down into a chasm of blackness, through which, as in a great shell, boomed that murmuring of the sea. It had a perilous ugly look, and it was plain that it would be foolhardy to attempt it at the moment without a light; and my fire was dying down. Besides, I was beginning to feel light-headed and worn out, partly from lack of food, no doubt.

As there was no food to be had, I recalled the old French proverb, "He eats who sleeps"—or something to that effect—and I determined to husband my strength once more with a brief rest. However, as I turned to throw some more wood on my fire—preparing to indulge myself with a little campfire cheerfulness as I dozed off—my eyes fell once more on that grim line of locked doors; and my curiosity, and an idea, made me wakeful again. I had burned down one door—why not another? Why not, indeed?

So I raked over my fire to the family vault nearest to me, and presently had it roaring and licking against the stout door. It was, apparently, not so solid as the gallery door had been. At all events, it kindled more easily, and it was not long before I had the satisfaction of uttering that down too.

As I did so, I caught sight of something in the interior that made me laugh aloud and behave generally like a madman. Of course, I didn't believe my eyes—but they persisted in declaring, nevertheless, that there in front of me was a great iron-bound oaken chest, to begin with. It might not, of course, contain anything but bones—but it might! The thing was too absurd. I must have fallen asleep—must be already dreaming! But no! I was laboring with all my strength to open it with one of those rusty cutlasses. It was a tough job, but my strength was as the strength of ten, for the old treasure-hunter's lust was upon me, and I had forgotten everything else in the world for the time.

At last, with a great wooden groan, as though its heart were breaking at having to give up its secret at last, it crashed open. I fell on my knees as though I had been struck by lightning, for it was literally brimming over with silver and gold pieces—doubletons and pieces of eight; English and French coins, too—guineas and louis d'or; "all—as Tobias' manuscript had said—"all good money."

For a while I knelt over it, dazed and blinded, lost; then I slowly plunged my hands into it; and let the pieces pour and pour through them, literally bathing them in gold and silver, as I had read of misers doing.

Then suddenly I broke out into an Irish jig—never having had any notion of doing such a thing before.

In fact I behaved as I have read of men doing, whom a sudden fortune has bereft of reason. For the time, at all events, I was a glimmering madman. Certainly, there was to be no sleep for me that night! But, in the full tide of my frenzy, I suddenly noticed something that brought me up sharp. Out beyond the doorway it was growing light. It was only a dim tremulous suffusion of it; indeed, but it was real daylight—coming in from somewhere or other—the blessed, blessed, daylight! God be praised!

"All Good Money."

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which I Understand the Feelings of a Ghost.

So, I surmised, I had been underground a whole day and two nights, and this was the morning of the second day after Calypso's disappearance. What had been happening to her all this time! My flesh crept at the thought, and, with that daylight stealing in like a living presence, and the sound and breath of the sea, my anguish returned a hundredfold.

As I stood on the little rocky platform outside the door through which I had burned my way, and looked down into the glimmering chasm beneath, and heard the fresh voice of the sea huskily rumbling and reverberating about hidden grottoes and channels, all that Calypso was to me came back with the keenness of a sword through my heart. Ah! there was my treasure—as I had known when my eyes first beheld her—compared with which that gold and silver in there, whose gleam had made me momentarily disheartened, was but so much dust and ashes. Ardently as I had sought it, what was it compared to one glance of her eyes? What if in the same hour, I had lost my true treasure, and found the false? At the thought, that glittering heap became abhorrent to me, and, without looking back, I sought for some way by which I could descend.

As my eyes grew accustomed to the dim light, I saw that there were some shallow steps cut diagonally in the rock, and down these I had soon made my way, to find myself in a roomy corridor, so much like that in which I had seen Calypso standing in the moonlight, that, for a moment, I dreamed it was the same, and started to run down it, thinking, indeed, that my troubles were over—that in another moment I would emerge through that enchanted door and face the sea.

But alas! Instead of a broad shining doorway, and open arms of freedom widespread for me to leap into, I came at last to a mere long narrow slit, through which I could gaze as a man gazes through a prison window at the sky.

The entrance had once been wide and free, but a mass of rock had fallen from above and blocked it up, leaving only a long crack through which the light passed to and fro.

MORE RED BLOOD AND STEADIER NERVES FOR RUN DOWN PEOPLE

The World Demands, Strong, Vigorous, Keen-Minded, Men and Women

It has been said of Americans that they work their habits overtime.

Many become nervous and inefficient by overwork. By worry, despondency, social affairs, robbing brain and body of needed rest; excessive use of tobacco, indulgence in strong alcoholic drinks—excesses of every kind that burn up the vital powers so necessary in these trying times to make both men and women fit to be of help to themselves and others.

It is time to be temperate in all things. The man or woman with impaired nerves caused by impoverished blood lacks vigor, the ambition, the endurance and the keen mind of those who avoid excesses.

Tiredness, despondency, fear, trembling hands, want of confidence and even cowardliness, are due in a large measure to almost nerveless people with plenty of red blood corpuscles and strong, healthy nerves have no desire to shrink work and lean on others for guidance and support.

There is hardly a nerve-shattered man or woman (unless of an organic disease) in America today who cannot become alert and clear in mind, vigorous and energetic in body in a very few weeks and at trifling cost.

To become strong and ambitious, to feel that work is not drudgery; to have steady nerves, abundance of red blood and power of endurance to be not only a man but as men now go, a superman, you must take seven tablets of Bio-Ten every day for seven days—and take them faithfully.

Take two after each meal and one at bedtime and after seven days take one only after meal until the supply is exhausted.

Then if you feel that any claim made in this special notice is untrue—if your nerves are not twice as steady as before; if you do not feel ambitious, more vigorous and keen-minded, the pharmacist who dispensed the tablets in you will gladly hand you back just what you paid for them.

Bio-Ten is without doubt the grandest remedy for nervous, rundown, weak, anemic men and women ever offered through druggists and is not at all expensive. All druggists in this city and vicinity have a supply on hand—sell many packages.

Here's One Way to Keep Cool

"You heat your house in winter; why not cool it in summer?"

This idea occurred to Dr. Alexander Graham Bell when the Washington weather became extremely stifling.

Former President Taft, when he was in the White House, had a refrigerating device put in the office, which since has fallen into disuse. But Dr. Bell believes he procured better results by his "home made" cooling arrangement in his Washington residence.

In a communication to the National Geographic Society Dr. Bell describes how he tricked the thermometer out of some 35 degrees—and you can try this out on your own home, if you are "handy" about the house:

"We go up to the Arctic regions and heat our houses and live," he explains. "We go down to the tropics and die."

"I have found one radical defect in the construction of our houses that absolutely precludes the possibility of cooling them to any great degree. You will readily understand the difficulty when you remember that cold air is heavier than warm air. You can take a bucket of cold air, for example, and carry it about in the summer-time and it will spill a drop; but if you make a hole in the bottom of your bucket, then, of course, the cold air will all run out.

"I began to think that it might be possible to apply the bucket principle to at least one room in my Washington home, and this secure a place of retreat in the summer-time. It seemed to be advisable to close up all openings near the bottom of the room to prevent the escape of cold air and open the windows at the top to let out the heated air of the room.

"Now, it so happens that I have in the basement of my house a swimming tank, and it occurred to me that since this tank holds water, it should certainly hold cold air; so I turned the water out to study the situation. The tank seemed to be damp and the sides felt wet and slimy.

"I reflected, however, that the condensation of moisture resulted from the fact that the sides of the tank were cooler than the air admitted. Water vapor will not condense on anything that is warmer than itself, and it occurred to me that if I introduced air that was very much colder than I wanted to use, then it would be warming up in the tank and become dryer all the time. It would no deposit moisture on the sides and would actually absorb the moisture there.

"I therefore provided a refrigerator, in which were placed large blocks of ice covered with salt. This was placed in another room at a higher elevation than the tank and a pipe covered with asbestos paper was employed to lead the cold air into the tank.

"The first effect was the drying of the walls, and then I felt the level of the cold air gradually rising. At last it came over my head. The tank was full, and I found myself immersed in cool air. I felt so cool and comfortable that it seemed difficult to believe that Washington stood sizzling outside. I climbed up the ladder in the swimming tank until my head was above the surface, and then found myself breathing a hot, damp, muggy atmosphere. I therefore speedily retreated into the tank, where I was perfectly cool and comfortable.

"Guided by this experience I tried another experiment in my house. I put the refrigerator in the attic and led the cold air downward through a pipe covered with asbestos into one of the rooms of the house. The doors were kept shut and the windows were opened at the top. The temperature in that room was perfectly comfortable, about 65 degrees.

"Some time ago the papers were speaking of an ice plant that had been installed in the White House and congratulated the President, then Mr. Taft, upon a temperature of only 80 degrees when the thermometer showed 100 degrees outside. Under similar conditions I enjoyed in my house a temperature of 65 degrees (the ideal temperature), with a delicious freshness in the air."

SHE BEGAN TO FEEL THERE WAS NO HOPE FOR HER RECOVERY

Leonidas B. Pemberton Restores How Plant Juice Restored His Wife's Health.

Nature has supplied a remedy in the ingredients of Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy. It tones, strengthens and invigorates the digestive organs, the liver, kidneys and intestines. It is purely vegetable and its vitalizing, corrective and reconstructive qualities are so pronounced that beneficial results are noticed from the first day.

That this is proven conclusively it is only necessary to listen to the statements of local people, who have given Plant Juice a fair trial. One of the most recent of these is from Mr. Leonidas B. Pemberton, of 847 Kirkbride avenue, N. S., Pittsburgh, who tells how his wife was relieved of a bad case of stomach trouble by Plant Juice. He said:

"My wife was born and raised in this city, and for years she has been troubled with her stomach. About six years ago her health commenced to fall gradually, and she could hardly keep anything on her stomach. She had headaches, as very dizzy, could not sleep at night and was gradually losing in weight. She had tried numbers of different medicines without relief, and began to feel that there was no hope of her recovery. A friend who knew in what a bad condition she was, insisted that she try Plant Juice. After a few doses it gave her some relief, and now after several weeks have passed, she is feeling fine. Her stomach is now in good condition; she can eat anything and digest it, sleeps well at night and it has toned up her nervous system. She is now able to do her own work again, the first time in three years. We are glad to recommend Plant Juice as it has made a well woman of my wife." Plant Juice is sold in Connelville at Roy Hetzel's Drug Store.—Adv.
